An approximate analytic solution which models a current tran-sient was developed in 6 . The model includes parameters which represent the w maximum current, the collection time constant of the junction, and the time con-w stant for initially establishing the ion track. The analytic solution was validated L s w by comparison with other computer models and is used in this study. A series of experiments, aimed at error analysis through the physical inser-tion of faults, was conducted by several investigators at the NASA AIRLAB test w bed facility. An experiment to study fault latency distributions through hardware W fault injections is described in 7 and 8 . Information gathered from these stu-dies shows that the data generated can provide considerable insight into error manifestation. Another useful study is 9 which describes a simulation experi-w...
