Re-direct examination. My recollection is that the contusion I found on the back part of the left side of the plaintiff's head was of larger surface than that on the brow. I think the injury on the left hand side of the head was about opposite the injury on the right side of the forehead. In judging the seriousness of the injury, the weapon with which it was given, the history of the injury and the direction of the blow have to be considered. Where hemiplegia ensues--that is caused by a lesion usually on the opposite side of the head from that of the hemiplegia. It is the lesion and not the blow that causes the paralysis. The counterblow is an injury which has been transmitted. A blow may occur on one side of the head, and there...

Reviews

This is the best pdf i actually have read till now. It typically fails to charge too much. Your life period will probably be transform the instant you total reading this publication.

-- Dr. Don Morissette V

This publication will not be simple to get started on looking at but quite entertaining to learn. It generally fails to cost an excessive amount of. You will not feel monotony at anytime of your time (that's what catalogues are for about if you ask me).
