Engin., Trans. 19. pp. 1581-1584, Dec., 1902.)--This is a description of a single-phase, high-tension, alternating current system for operating trunk line railways. A single-phase synchronous motor is carried on the locomotive. This is coupled direct to a continuous current dynamo and exciter. The individual motor armatures on the train are connected to the leads from the continuous-current dynamo, the magnets being all separately excited by the exciter. A field reversing switch is provided in the dynamo field circuit. By manipulating the dynamo field rheostat, the current through the motor armatures necessary to obtain the required tractive effort can be obtained at any desired voltage, from the lowest to the full speed voltage, in either direction. A perfectly smooth and rapid acceleration can thus be obtained with minimum energy from the source of supply. The author claims twelve advantages for his system. A diagram of connections is given. (Centralblatt Accumulatoren, 3. pp. 4-6, Jan. 1; 32-33, Feb. 1; 41-45, Feb. 15; and pp. 53-56, March 1, 1902.)--This series of articles consists of a long and detailed mathematical investigation of the conditions under which the motor of an electromobile acts as a generator when the vehicle is running down-hill, or at other times when a braking effect is required, and of...
