The Bomb CHAPTER I Hold the high way and let thy spirit thee lead And Truth shal thee deliver, it is no drede. MY name is Rudolph Schnaubelt. I threw the bomb which killed eight policemen and wounded sixty in Chicago in 1886. Now I be here in Reichholz, Bavaria, dying of consumption under a false name, in peace at last. But it is not about myself I want to write: I am finished. I got chilled to the heart last winter, and grew steadily worse in those hateful, broad, white, Muenchener streets which are baked by the sun and swept by the icy air from the Alps. Nature or man will soon deal with my refuse as they please. But there is one thing I must do before I go out, one thing I have promised to do. I must tell the story of the man who spread terror through America, the greatest man that ever lived, I think; a born rebel, murderer and martyr. If I can give a fair portrait of Louis Lingg, the Chicago Anarchist, as I knew him, show the body and soul and mighty purpose of him, I shall have done more for men than when I threw the bomb. . . . How am I to tell the story Is it possible to paint a great man of action in words; show his cool calculation of forces, his unerring judgment, and the tiger spring The best thing...
